The District

The Hopland Fire Protection District was founded in 1952

The HFPD is a rural fire agency located in Hopland California at the South end of Mendocino County along the Russian River. The HFPD is considered a volunteer agency supplemented by paid staff. The HFPD covers 110 square miles of land, 17 miles of US Highway 101, 9 miles of CA Highway 175 and many more miles of rural and urban roads. Due to the wide variety of topographical attributes of the district's area, HFPD responds to a wide variety of emergency calls. The types of emergency responses can be anything from traffic collisions to swift water rescue, medical emergencies to wildland fires or high angle cliff rescue to river flooding emergencies. HFPD serves several large businesses such as Fetzer Vineyards, Vintage Wine Estates, Duckhorn Wine Company and Ahlborn Fence and Steel Inc. These response provide many different challenges to the response area such as large tanks, flammable metals, heavy machinery, high voltage battery storage, hazardous materials and large gatherings of people. Due to these many hazards, the HFPD volunteers have to go above and beyond to have the training and knowledge on how to handle the many different scenarios that could be presented. HFPD volunteer members attend weekly trainings and give up countless hours away from their families to attend trainings in and out of town, in order to better serve the residences of the HFPD.

Distinguishing Characteristics: Personnel in all classifications are expected to perform at high level of competency in all emergency and non-emergency activities. This includes, but not limited to firefighting, fire apparatus operation and emergency medical responses. Personnel in this classification are expected to acquire requisite skills and knowledge of the District's operations, policies and apparatus while performing their job duties satisfactorily.
